Milk, cheese and yogurt provide a source of high-quality protein because they contain optimal quantities of all of the essential amino acids the body cannot make on its own. Protein helps curb hunger and can help you feel satisfied longer. A growing body of research supports benefits of higher protein diets not only for athletic and fitness performance, but also for weight management and healthy aging.

Dairy foods contribute to gut health. Fermented foods containing live cultures can add beneficial bacteria to the digestive tract and contribute to a healthier microbiota impacting digestion and gut barrier function. Yogurt and most cheeses are fermented foods as well as fresh kimchi, dill pickles, sauerkraut, canned sauerkraut, kombucha, most soy sauces and most wine and beer.
